

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method for adjusting the frequency of an electronic component device includes the step of etching an electrode disposed on a surface of the electronic component device by irradiating an ion beam onto the electrode. The ion beam irradiation is performed while moving at least one of the electronic component device and the ion beam in directions along the surface on which the electrode is disposed.